The Conviction of Birchall-

All the finely-drawn theories of counse for the Canadian murderer BIRCHALL were unavailing. The jury found him guilty and he is sentenced to be hanged on Noember 14th. His crime consisted in luring BENWELL across the ocean to Canada by means of an advertisment inserted in a

Niagara Falls. Found at night, waked from his sleep, he calmly went off with the officer without asking a question. Thenceforward he carried the confident look of innocence; was a charmingly docite prisoner; dressed with great neatness; was the coolest man in the court; sketched the scenes of the trial, and apparently had no fear as to the result. m his sleep, he calmly went off with the There is no established rule prescribing ow the innocent and the guilty should behave, but the blood-stained villain generally manages to look more innocent than innocence itself. In the stillness of the night, in the dark hours with his own conscience, he has thought it all over. He has determined what to do if accused; what when arrested; what when put upon trial, and what when submitted to the scrutiny of the public's eyes. Nine times out of ten he executes his plans and becomes a ever-care sort of fellow, who excites the dmiration of the crowd by his nerve. We have seen one such passing his hours in court boyishly throwing "paper balls" at friends seated about him. We have seen another plucking a butter-cup from the ground where he gave the death-blow to his victim and jauntily placing it on the lapel of his coat with a face as smiling as a May morn.

There seems no limit to the audacious assumption of innocence by these But usually they over-act; it is seen to be acting, not naturalness. It would not be well to attempt to lay down a rigid formula for searching the hearts of used persons, but usually it is the innoent man who is nervous and excited and could not have been near the swamp about the time of poor BENWELL's death. But in vain. All the line of defence set up for the prisoner was swept away. The jury saw the truth through the almost blinding storm of eloquence and said "guilty," and the Judge approved their verdict.

The Work of Congress.

The session of Congress now drawing to a close will be memorable because of the great power permitted the Speaker of the House by the majority and because of the tariff bill and the unsuccessful attempt to control elections for members of the House

All the testimony taken goes to show that the House of Representatives has a very untrustworthy postmaster. His name is WHEAT, and he has been adding to his ample salary by compelling a mail-wagon contractor to pay him a monthly bonus of clearly driven into this course. Before he took it he consulted Speaker REED and the Clerk of the House as to his duty in the premises. They seem not to have been particularly shocked at WHEAT's mode of particularing wealth, but nevertheless for prudential reasons advised that the $150 per month be covered into the Treasury.

Mr. Whear is endeavoring to defend himself, or at least palliate his crime, by showing that some such practice prevailed when the Democratic postmaster Dalros dent as provided by the diplomatic and consular appropriation act.

This is one of the results of the Pan American Congress. Commissioners have already been appointed by Brazil, Vene-zuela, Peru, Mexico, and Colombia. The covernments are not pledged to do anything more than pay their proportionate share of the expense of making a general survey for a railway line to connect the three Americas.

The McKinley Bill Passed. At twenty minutes past 6 o'clock yester-day afternoon the conference report on the tariff bill was adopted by the Senate, Messrs, Plums of Kansas, Paddock of Ne-braska, and Pettionew of South Dakota being the only Republicans voting with the Democrats against the economic iniquity. It has already been adopted by cally a law, since our partisan President is only too anxious to approve it. As Mr. Carisir says, it reduces the revenues and increases taxation. It bears with special severity on agriculture and the South, an agricultural section in the main, and is in deed and in truth and not in any mere rhetorical sense a robbery of the masses of the people for the benefit of favored classes. It is earnestly to be hoped that the vote of the three Northwestern senators against the measure is an indication that the people of the great section they represent are getting their eyes wide open to the fact that the Republican idea of protection is for them, as for the South, such protection as the wolf affords the lamb.

A Common Country.

The New York Herald, which is quite independent in politics, praises the speech made by Mr. HENEY WATTERSON at Boston, and speaks with considerable eloquence of the evils of sectionalism, and adds:

Taxes Increased. That was a fine speech vesterday of Mr.

CARLISLE exposing the pretence that the McKinley bill is a measure to reduce and equalize taxation. He showed most unmistakably that it puts new and heavier burdens upon the people-especially upon the tillers of the soil. Hostility to the South and friendship to monopolists have had more to do with fixing duties than any broad and patriotic consideration for the good of the people. Speaker REED will soon start out upon a round of engagements to speak in the doubtful States. His real object is to advertise himself for the presidency. Mr. BLAINE should take notice; Mr. HARrison also, though the latter can have but scant hopes of reëlection.

who turns from red to white as he listens to hear smiling with incredulity. The innocent-looking murderers of this land have numbered thousands.

The Encrall trial awakens old memories. The press was denounced for its detective work. The police got little honor for ferreting out the criminal; it was charged to the discredit of the newspapers by the counsel for the defence. There was a vigorous effort to show that the deceased had committed suicide and a hard-fought attempt to demonstrate that BIRCHALL could not have been near the swamp about protest against the folly and impertmence of this advice.

The Republican party, of which Mr. Curtis is a member, is at the bottom of all the grievances which oppress the farmer, especially the southern farmer. Their last act has been to make the negro Langston the leader of the Republican party in Virginia—a negro who openly prides himself upon his mixed blood and offers miscegenation as the solution of the race question. Every man within the sound of Mr. Curtis's voice could have told him that this act of the Republican party and this course of the negro Republican leader would make the negroes worse than they were before, and that already they were so bad that in that very neighborhood, like any other in cis-montane Virginia, no movable property was safe from theft, no building from fire, and no woman from assault upon suitable occasions.

of the first time since Lzs surrendered to first time since Lzs surrendered to Grant a defect in the bankruptey bill will go over to the existional. The sankruptey bill will go over to the existional. The sankruptey bill will go over to the best session. So will that for the exat bishment of an intermediary court of appeals.

The legislation has been partisan and sectional. The tariff bill is very bad, but the most atrocious step taken was that in which Speaker Rzzn assumed, without the protest of the party in power, unprecedented powers. Unless the people at the polls in November record their rebuke of this the House never will be in the ruture what it was in the past. It will not be a deliberative body; it will not be a body of freemen even. We hope that this questions them to morrows.

Some mischievous person during the height of the dance is said to have sext-tered cayenne-pepper upon the floor. Its effect was such as to cause much confusion and finally to break up the assemblage. The atmosphere in the room became too hot for comfort. Two parties were subsequently arrested on the charge of disturbing the order of the occasion, but the Mayor this morning discharged them for want of evidence.

SEEKING SOUTHERN LOCATIONS.

Western Capitalists Visit Staunton to Se lect Sites for New Industries.

[Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.] STAUNTON, VA., September 28, 1890.
A party of twelve or fifteen western capitalists seeking locations in the South for various industries visited this city yesterday. They were taken in charge by several of our prominent business-men, in-cluding President M. Erskine Miller, of the Development Company, and shown over the city and the beautiful suburban property of the company. They seemed much pleased with the advantages of property of the company. They seemed much pleased with the advantages of Staunton as a point for establishing industries, owing to its railroad facilities, its proximity to iron, coal, timber, &c., and, as one of the party remarked to your correspondent, its greatest advantage was that skilled workmen would not hesitate to move to a town like Staunton, where they could have the advantages of our superior schools, churches, and society for their family.

Several of the party entered into nego-tiations for sites for plants to manufac-ture, respectively, slate goods of all de-scriptions, such as mantels, &c. wieker and rattan goods, beer-orewery, planing-mills for dressing hard woods, &c.

Grand-Master W. F. Larrabee visited Staunton Lodge, No 45, L. O. O. F., the 26th instant. He was accompanied by Grand-Chief-Patriarch Davis, of Richmond, and Grand-Past-Representative Beach, of Bridgewater. The Grand Master reports a very large increase in new lodges since April last. The attendance was unusually large.

An excellent supper was served by Caterer Alex. Teabo, of the Virgima Hotel. The occasion was very interesting, and every one appeared to have enjoyed himself. ODD-FELLOWS.

From the way horses and other exhibits are now coming in for the fair, beginning Tuesday, the prospects are that the ex-hibits will be unusually large. Crowds of country people are expected.

[Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

ALEXANDRIA, VA., September 30, 1890.

Since the Washington authorities have made war on the pool-sellers and other gamblers who did business in Washington they have been doing business just outside of the District line. Recently those quarters got rather warm and they decided to remove to that already unsavory portion of Alexandria county known as Jackson City, at the Virginia end of the Long Bridge over the Potomac river. Yesterday the move was made and to-day the selling of pools on races, &c., was commenced. New buildings have been put up for their accommodation and wires have been run in, and to-day the place is in full blast, all the Washington gambling fraternity coming over to assist at the opening. They claim that they have no fear of being molested by the authorities of Alexandria county. It is not believed that Commonwealth's Attorney Clements will allow them to remain undisturbed. If the county authorities carry out this time the policy they have been pursuing for the past two months the newly-settled gamblers will have to keep their eyes open if they do not wish to be caught by the Sheriff and his posse.

With the unananimous white vote of the district against him and a divided colored vote to contend against Langston's defeat is almost a foregone conclusion.

The Farmers' Alliance is said to be rapidly spreading among the colored people of the countries, In the county of Prince George several sub-alliances have already deep corganized, and the work of organization in other counties is also in progress. There seems no doubt that in the early future the alliance will be so compact as to embrace the great majority of the farmers' and many the most of the farmers' interests.

An historic campaign document.

Captain James Barron Hope's beautiful metrical address entitled "Mahone's Brigade," which was published in magnificent form by the Republican State Committee and curculated as a lepublican campaign document during the late gubernatorial campaign, was placed during that memorable canvass in the hands of nearly every ex.Confederate soldier in the State. It was the most beautiful as well as the most elegant campaign document form by the Ropeling of the most beautiful as well as the most elegant campaign document or ever issued, and constituted a splendid tribute to one of the late war. It fell dead in a political sense, but has been carefully preserved as an eloquent tribute to heroet valor, and as such is prized by the soldiers whose heroism it extolled. In art and beauty the publication of the address could not be well excelled.

The party then went to Clifton, Ont., and spent a week there, Pelley all the time fretting about the delay and Birchall calming him with plausible stories. Birchall then showed Pelley the notice about the finding of Benwell's body and said he would go at once and see the body. Pelley accompanied him. Birchall then showed Pelley a telegram from Benwell at New York requesting that his luggage be sent there. Pelley then came to New York and Birchall went to Princeton and identified the body. BLAZERS AND JACKETS

Already with the story of frosts in the Northwest and the maples here and there throwing out a branch of scarlet, the world begins to think of the coming season and the feminine half of it to consider wherewithal it shall be clothed.

Even when the days are warm enough for the thin, light gowns of summer there comes a chill into the evening air that demands something more in the line of protection. Naturally one turns to the BLAZER JACKET as the most comfortable and convenient of all the garments. The Jackets will retain all their popularity during the season to come that they have enjoyed during the past, and they are even now more jaunty and becoming than before,

KAUFMANN & CO. have just received a large quantity of these garments in all the latest styles of SMOOTH CLOTHS, CHEVIOTS, and NARROW and WIDE WALE DIAGO. NALS, some made perfectly plain and others trimmed in velvet, plush, and Astrachan trimming, which is very effect-It is impossible to convey an idea of chan, seal, and monkey, which were purchased with a particular view of meeting the early autumn trade.
